ASSESSMENT SERVICES

- Most assessments are offered in a child or young person's home and/or school or college setting so that they are familiar with the environment.
- The assessments are designed to be as practical and interactive as possible. Different components are presented to maximise concentration, engagement and motivation.
- All assessments allow for movement, snack and comfort breaks as needed.
- Some children and young people prefer a familiar person to stay nearby as they settle in to the assessment and others need this reassurance throughout. This can also be a useful way to understand the assessment process and report better. As long as the integrity of the assessment is maintained we can work around the child or young person's wishes.

- Whenever possible assessments include the child or young person's views and experiences. This is central to the process and often valued by other professionals as one of the most useful parts of the report.
- All assessments aim to include observations from home and school or college settings through the completion of checklists and/or questionnaires.
- Assessments aim to describe strengths and make recommendations to support any difficulties a child or young person may experience with their communication, social participation, learning and/or exams. It may lead to a diagnosis but will often suggest onward referral or contribute to a diagnosis made by another professional.

An assessment may contribute to evidence for exam access arrangements if the school or college agrees and completes JCQ Form 8 Part 1 beforehand.
- As a holder of a current Assessment Practising Certificate (APC) these reports follow the standards set out by the SpLD Assessment Standards Committee (SASC). As such they can be used to support any future application for Disabled Students' Allowance.
